

As a busy and respnsible adult, time with family is very limited. Prior to the enactment of the Indiana No-Call law, I would often have what little time was available to spend with family members continually interrupted by non-stop telemarketing calls. Often in the past, when visiting my parents and grandparents, for example, a one hour visit would be interrupted 7 or 8 times by telemarketing calls. My parents and Grandparents have all passed away in recent years. I would give anything to have back the precious time that was stolen from me over the years while being harrassed by telemarketers that I could have spent with my relatives. But that time is lost forever! The Indiana No Call works very well - my only wish is that it would have been enacted 20 years ago. But we have it now and I appeal to you - PLEASE PLEASE PLEASE do NOTHING that will in any way weaken or supersede the very effective law we now have!!!!
